CONTEST DETAILS ARRANGED

City Beautiful Commission to Furnish All Seeds and Prepare the Ground for Planting; Many Lots Available for Cultivation; Task for Flowers.

Complete arrangements for the school garden were made under the supervision of the City Beautiful Commission, were made at the meeting of the committee with Herbert Hemenway, the city superintendent, and the Sunday school superintendent, on the 10th of August night. The committee on vacant lots was represented by J. E. Angie, superintendent of the Fayette County Gas and Electric Company. At this time the committee would have ample ground ready plowed, harrowed and fertilized by next week. Only lots that will produce good crops will be used. The committee will select the best soil, crush all necessary seeds and limit the number of kinds of vegetables and flowers to be considered in the competition. The seeds for each school will be furnished. Only such as will thrive on moderately fertile soil and mature by early fall will be used. It was also decided that for this competition all crops must be harvested by Chautauqua Week, and that a city agricultural fair will be held in connection with the Chautauqua, at which vegetables and flowers grown in these gardens alone will be displayed. There will be special prizes for these exhibits.

To be eligible to compete for prizes the lots used must be properly labeled and ready to be judged during the week preceding Chautauqua Week. Such lots will produce a rich growth of bright green, making their beauty spots all winter, and providing such each can be seen to be turned down next season.

In deciding the winners in the competition, vegetables will count 75 per cent, and the appearance of the plants being judged by the quantity of marketable vegetables produced. In the final awards the appearance of the gardens during the summer months will count for as much as their productivity.

Each garden will be planted with a border of dwarf nasturtiums and planted will be radishes, peas, onions, beans, turnips, early sweet corn, beets and tomatoes. All vegetables produced will belong to the host or

Not more than 300 square feet of land will be allotted to one boy or girl in this contest, and any boy or girl failing to take proper care of the plot assigned, through neglect, will lose possession, and the plot given to some one who will care for it. Each Sunday school competing will be required to furnish efficient adult instruction and

The prizes to be awarded will be determined by the Chamber of Commerce, and the judges will be appointed by that body. The basis of award will be the amount of product.

The inter-Sunday school contest will be limited to boys and girls between the ages of eight and fourteen. Other plots will be secured by the city beautiful commission for older boys and girls who care to make use of them, and for boys and girls who are not members of the church, but whose Sunday schools are not in the competition. The work will not be limited to Sunday school children. Ample provision will be made for all children of any part of the city who care to try their hands at gardening.

Mr. Angus has completed arrangements for the coming contest between Matthews and Earl, having selected the roughest, stoniest lots in Connellsville and secured the most content with this he has arranged to have moving pictures taken for exhibition later for the benefit of the City Beautiful movement. The contestants say that inasmuch as the farm furnishes most of the brains as well as muscle to run the towns and cities of America and they having

All Sunday schools desiring to enter the contest should register with Secretary Baer not later than Monday.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Use It Like a Cold Cream and Dry Eczema Eruptions
Tious Right Up.

The moment you apply hold-sulphur to an itching or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a renowned dermatologist.

This remarkable sulphur made into a thick cream of such prompt relief, even in aggravated Eczema, that it is a never-ending source of amusement to physicians.

For many years hold-sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous eruptions by reason of its cooling, pain-killing, and soothing properties and nothing has ever been found to take its place in relieving irritable and inflammatory affections of the skin. While not at all a new discovery, it is a new remedy, yet in every instance it immediately soothes the itching irritation and heals the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again manifests itself.

Any good pharmacist will supply an ounce of hold-sulphur cream, which should be applied to the affected parts like the ordinary cold cream. It is not unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded is very welcome, particularly when the Eczema is accompanied with tortuous itching. —Adv.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts for Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork. They get sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and thus the uric acid is retained in the blood and to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys are weak and feel like lumps of lead, and you have aching pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, and stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jai Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of uric acid and common salt, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jai Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

This is an unusual vaudeville act and should prove exceedingly interesting for the children as well as the grown folks. Music and Billie Chant present their clever comedy, singing, talking and dainty dancing act. Scott and Anetta, those athletic, energetic, boys and women, offer some handy stunts that always are hit. With the usual three fine photographs the Arcade bill certainly looks good and will probably draw a nice business.

The MAID of the FOREST

A Romance of St. Clair's Defeat
By RANDALL PARRISH
ILLUSTRATED BY D. J. LAVIN
COPYRIGHT A. C. McCLURG & CO., 1913

"General St. Clair," he cried, "we must get out of here, sir. My men cannot stand five minutes longer. If that line breaks it will cost every life. For God's sake, let us go."

"Yes—yes, Colonel Darke, but how is it to be accomplished, sir? See those foot cowards!"

Darke swept his hand out to the south in sudden gesture.

"There is only one way, sir—there by the road. I can hold the regulars steady; they'll cover the rear, and give the others a chance. One fierce charge forward with the bayonet will drive those devils back, and upon the way. May I try it, sir?"

"Ay, try it. Hold! I'll lead them myself. Here, Simmons, Cawley, lead those skulkers into the road there, while we clear a path."

I sprang forward with the others in response to swift orders. We made the woods and plunged into their shadows. There was a fierce, mad struggle face to face, bayonets and clutched muskets, knives and tomahawks. St. Clair, on an artillery horse, led the way. We swept the front of the broad road clear, the impetuosity of our reckless charge forcing the startled savages into full retreat. Then we dropped to our knees, loading and firing to hold the advantage. Behind us, into the open road, surged the mob of panic-stricken men, fighting and crowding, beginning their long race back to the Ohio. It was a sickening sight, the white, ghastly faces, the wounded limping along, the brutal acts of fear, and over all the senseless cries and wailing. I caught glimpses of women among the seething mass, hustled and thrown under foot in the mad terror. The sight of them brought back to me the remembrance of Rene. Was she also crushed in that mob, fleeing for life, or was she still in the cook tent, trembling as she stared out helplessly on the stricken field? I turned and ran, heedless of all else, plunging through the stream of fugitives, plowing a passage with my bulk. I had done my duty—now I must save her!

CHAPTER XXV.

The Retreat.

I had no faith I should find her there, but I fought my way through the tent. It had been knocked half over, the camp stove overturned, the benches smashed, the cooking wood with smoking holes! I lunged back the sagging canvas, and cast one glance within. As heaven witnesses, she stood there, the blanket still wrapped about her, her hands grasping a rifle. She turned toward me. Unconsciously her lips gave utterance to a cry of relief, and her expression changed. I sprang forward, eager, glad.

"Rene, you are here!" I cried out.

"Why did you stay?"

"It was the word of monsieur," she answered simply. "Monsieur said stay till he come."

"Yes, yes, I know; but I never thought of this; never dreamed of such a defeat. But there is no time to waste in talk. There is nothing to do but run for it now! Come, I am here."

Before she realized what I was going to do, I had flung away my rifle and seized her in my arms. She was a light, slender thing, and I held her tight in the folds of the blanket, scarcely feeling her weight. She made no effort to resist, yet her eyes—bewildered, half-frightened—looked into my face. I gave them no heed, my whole purpose concentrated on the one effort to save her, to fight a passage through that mob of frightened men. The spirit of panic had gripped me also—not for myself, but for her! Here was my duty now; not back yonder where those regulars stood grinning in line and died with their shoulders touching; not where I had fought all day in the powder-cloud facing those forest demons—but in the mob of fugitives, battling and cursing for their lives. The road was littered with guns thrown away, with discarded blankets and powder horns. I dared not look back, straining every muscle, staggering forward over the rut. The roar of guns behind grew faint in the distance; the spit of rifles from the thickets ceased. Exhausted, breathless, reeling from fatigue, I put her down, and, with arm about her, stood an instant looking back.

They were coming, a dark mass bearing down upon us, but ahead of them, wild with terror, his harness flapping at his heels, his head flung from side to side, charged an artillery horse full tilt. In his mad terror he saw and knew nothing. He came straight at us, running as if crazed. I flung the girl into the side of the road and leaped recklessly for his head. My hand gripped the mane, then the last link of the bridle, was flung from my feet, jerked into the air, but hung; my moccasins touched again. I was dashed forward, my head half unconscious by a blow, but weight told, I got fingers on his nostrils, and he stood still, panting and trembling. Clinging to him, warned by shouts to hurry, I stripped the harness and pointed her onto the bank.

back. Even as this was accomplished the head of that shrieking mob was on us; two brute grabbed her by the arm, seeking to pull her down, and I struck him with all the force I had. Then I ran forward, clasping the horse by the bit, wrenching our way, heedless of who opposed or blocked our passage. And they made way for us; even in their blind terror, they swept aside to escape being trampled under the animal's hoofs, and left before us a clear path.

I looked eagerly for some place to which to turn aside, saw the faint trace of an Indian trail, seemingly leading down the bank of the stream, and, with instant decision, turned into it. I walked the horse now, and Rene sat up straight, and fastened her disarranged hair. The narrow trail led through dense thickets and about a slight hill; in five minutes we were out of sight of the road, alone in the wilderness. To the right, through trees, was the glimmer of the river. The horse panted heavily, and the way was rough. There was blood I noticed now, on his flank, and he limped slightly as he walked. I staggered and reeled from weariness, feeling rascals from excitement, yet kept grimly on until we must have covered two miles, wandering in and out among the low hills. No sounds reached us, and as we came into a narrow ravine, promising concealment, I released my grasp on the bit and staggered back against the bank. Mademoiselle slipped from her seat and hastened to me.

"You are worn out, monsieur, wounded?"

"Worn out, yet, but nothing has touched me save a blow or two. I think we can rest now."

Then it occurred to me, a thought that had swept into my mind once before—we had no provisions, no chance to get away and we dare not shoot, nor build a fire.

"What is it, monsieur?"

"Why, we have nothing to eat, Rene," I admitted reluctantly. "It is a long journey to the Ohio, and how are we to keep from starving? Faithful but I am near that now."

She stood before me, slender, erect, the blanket draped about her, her eyes lowered.

"It was mine to remember, monsieur," she said simply, as if it was all the most ordinary thing in the world. "I know not what would happen, and there was food there. We had the women ran away, and I would not go, because you told me not. I knew it would be best that I take some. You do not blame me, monsieur?"

"Blame! you are a jewel; but I see nothing of it! Where?"

"Tie here, monsieur; I am glad if please you."

She flung aside the blanket, dropping it to the ground, revealing a black ammunition bag strapped across her shoulder. I remembered now feeling it when I held her in my arms, vaguely wondering what it was. She unclasped and opened it.

"Monsieur must eat," she said gravely, "and sleep. Then he will be strong again."

I tried to do as she said, munching a few morsels. Her actions, her words, her manner toward me, both bewildered and angered. She had assumed the part of a servant—chosen it, as if she would thus teach me my own place. In every possible way she showed me she was not there from choice, but necessity. I lay back, looking with the food, my appetite gone. The wounded horse had been down to the river and drank; now he was pawing the snow in an effort to discover food. Over in the east, but some distance off, a rifle cracked ominously in the silence. My head felt back against the bank, and I was sound asleep.

It was two days later when we toiled up a long hill, and came out upon the summit. I no longer needed to lead the horse, and was plodding along wearily behind. Much of the snow had melted, leaving the soil soft, and the trees appeared bare, phantom-like, against the sky. Rene rode silently, wrapped in her blanket, for the air was chill and damp, her head bent, her eyes straight ahead. I have no remembrance that we had spoken for an hour. Beyond the hill summit there was an escarpment of rock, giving an open view ahead. As I gazed off over the trees below, my heart gave a great bound—there, scarce a mile away, flowing between leagues of forest, was the broad Ohio, its waters silvery in the sun. I turned to her and pointed.

"At last, Rene," I cried, forgetting. "We are safe now; see! There is the river."

She lifted her eyes and looked.

"Yes, monsieur."

"Why do you ever speak to me in that tone? You answer me always as if you were my servant."

"Your servant! I was looking at me now," she said, "monsieur, I am free; whatever put that in your head? I haven't known what to think, what to do since we have been together. Back on the Maumee I—I thought you loved me."

"I do love you, monsieur,"

"You—love me?" I stammered. "And yet bear yourself as you do?"

"Yes, monsieur; how else could I do? You are white; I am an Indian. Is that all? You think that makes it different? Rene, I love you; our yonder is my home; I would take you there; I would say to those who know me—here is my wife."

"Your—your wife!" There was doubt, questioning in her eyes.

"Yes, of course; how could you think otherwise?"

"Oh, monsieur, how could I know! How could I believe? I was an Indian girl, a Wyandot. It is not so the white men come to our villages. I have seen them—the red-coats, the traders of France. They take with the strong hand, and then laugh, and go away. Then you came and grasped me, and said get into the canoe. I tried to no, but you said yes, I must. You did not ask me, monsieur—you spoke stern, angry. I was frightened, I dare not say no, so I did as you said—I was your prisoner; you had taken me as the warriors of the Wyandots take the maidens of the Ojibwas."

"Then if that was so, why did you not leave me—that night the Indians passed us in camp?"

"Her cheeks flamed."

"I could not, monsieur—I loved you."

"And now—now you will go with me down there—a prisoner no longer but my own?"

"Always and forever?"

"Always and forever," I answered gravely.

There was something new, wonder in the depths of the dark eyes that looked into mine. I saw her hands clasp the white cross at her throat, then they were held out to me.

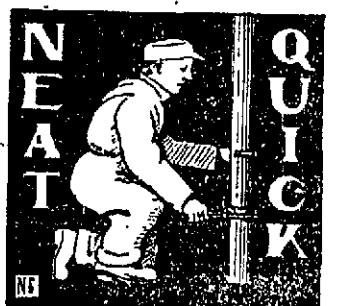

"I am so glad, monsieur," she said softly, "so glad!"
